

Scott's team-building programs give Coast the edge

SCOTT Estrich's energy and passion has set a benchmark that would be hard to beat.

With over 15 years' experience in team-building, training, group facilitation, indigenous culture and nature experiences, Scott has established a unique business.

BushLab Team Boosting is a specialist team-building and conference business operating from Noosa that offers programs and activities aimed at the conference market, local businesses, schools and community groups.

"These programs are totally unique," Scott said.

"They are helping to give the Coast conference market an edge as a leading destination for visiting groups."

Programs include Corporate Didjing!, an interactive program that challenges participants to learn to play Australia's iconic instrument in 40 minutes.

"Clan groups are then formed to work together to make a theme song that is performed using these fresh playing skills," Scott said.

"No previous musical experience is required and this offers the most fun and surprising results you will ever experience."

"grape" proportions.

"This is a rare chance for teams to get their hands (and noses) dirty in the art of blending a wine, using wines supplied by one of Australia's leading boutique wine companies, Tar & Roses," he said.

"Winemakers Don Lewis and Narelle King provide the base and finished wines, as well as the secret blending formulas for their current vintage.

"Teams are challenged to compete to see who can work together to match the winning blend in time. This is the perfect workplace or conference activity.

"The Legend of Crooked Neck is the Coast's very own team-building activity, transporting the team back to the Dreamtime and the local legend of the Gubbi Gubbi people."

With 10 years' experience playing the didgeridoo around the world, Scott also performs at corporate presentations.

"In a region already blessed with outstanding nature and environs, high-quality venues and accommodation, and a lively food and wine culture, BushLab's unique, exciting corporate activities contribute to the region becoming a leading conference and tourist destination both nationally and internationally," he said.
